THE 190TH BUCKTAILS: CATCHIN' BOBBY LEE
By William P. Robertson

When the original Bucktails mustered out of service after the Battle of Bethesda Church on May 31, 1864, nearly half of the survivors joined the newly formed 190th Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry under their old commander, Colonel Ross Hartshorne. When asked why he reenlisted in this new Bucktail Regiment, Private Boone Crossmire said, "To see the thing through, I reckon. Once you've wounded a big buck, ya gotta follow the blood trail 'til ya finds 'im." His pal, Sergeant Hosea Curtis, didn't need such motivation. He just loved to fight. And fight they did as skirmishers at Petersburg, the Weldon Railroad, and Five Forks. With brutal forced marches, on little or no food, they finally catch their quarry, Robert E. Lee, at Appomattox Court House. It's the Bucktails' bravery that wins the day, and each man's mettle that seals the victory on Palm Sunday, April 9, 1865.
